In the foregoing communication the German government points out that the violence of the explosion and the place in which the steamship was struck indicate that it was due to a mine. ## Wilson Never Intended to Defend Civilization

President Used Strong Words to Avoid Necessity for were acknowledged in many quar-Strong Action, Never Picturing Himself as Sword-

Bearer of Outraged Humanity.

By FRANK H. SIMONDS. Washington, Sept. 14 .- If one is to get the real meaning of the situation at the capital as contrasted with the fluctuations recorded in the daily news, which are relatively unimportant, there are several misapprehensions which must be discarded. The Washington fact at this time of crisis is not in the least what it has been represented to be or appeared to be.

First of all, it is necessary to drop all notion that Mr. Wilson has ever intended to put this country forward as the defender of civilization or international law, whatever the cost. All the praise, applause, commendation, that has been showered upon the administration because of this alleged purpose is utterly beside the mark. It gave the administration a great deal of pleasure at the outset, but it has bedevilled the situation

It was to avoid trouble that the "strict accountability" note was sent. There was not the least intention of getting us into trouble as the champion of

Administration Had No German Policy.

The second misapprehension that must be removed is that this country has pursued a clear, consistent, carefully-thought-out programme in the German debate. It has done nothing of the sort, and this despite the new firmness and intelligence which Mr. Lansing has brought to the State Department. Such policy as may now exist is his contribution, but his hands have been terribly tied by a past for which he has no responsibility. Up to the time he came the administration had never had a German policy

What has happened since the Lusitania crime, before which there never was the slightest thought of complications, is this: The crime produced not only a foreign but a domestic crisis. Mr. Wilson was instantly assailed by all the Middle West politicians and by all the propagandists of German leanings. He was warned by these to get into war was political suicide, to stay out the height of political wisdom.

The original note was sent to keep us out of war. It had failed to abolish the danger—it had done more; it had increased it. In the face of this fact Mr. Bryan and his Middle West friends began to bombard the White House. The result was the sending of the "omit no word or act" note and Mr. Bryan's assurance to Dr. Dumba.

Uncle Sam, Defender of Humanity,

But again there was trouble. The public, the world, which had hailed the first note as the assumption of the role of defender of humanity by the administration, read in the second note a reaffirmation of this high moral purpose. Mr. Bryan sought to reduce the evil by his talk with the Austrian Ambassador. He saw the way things were going. There was no difference between Mr. Wilson and Mr. Bryan over the necessity of
